About Us

The World Hospital at Home Community is an international platform to advance the hospital at home (HaH) model and ecosystem. Best practices are shared from across the globe in an effort to drive a new era of patient-centric acute care that further enables the home to be the primary place of human healing.

The last decade has unleashed significant research, operational knowledge, and innovation in delivering hospital-level acute care in the home. However, there is still great opportunity to enhance this model of care through further research, innovation, and effective policymaking.

Already, the HaH model has gained a foothold in several countries, including Australia, France, Israel, Italy, Spain, the U.K., and the United States.

As an international HaH community, we are jointly working to redesign acute care delivery with a keen focus on maximizing time at home while ensuring the best possible health outcomes and patient/clinician experience of care.

We passionately believe that the HaH model can be integrated and/or further scaled in health care systems around the world and look forward to joining with like-minded individuals to educate and build awareness of its role and benefits.

Our mission is built on 3 core pillars:

Fostering global collaboration:

Connecting HaH clinicians and staff worldwide to share knowledge, overcome challenges, and scale programs effectively.

Delivering the latest insights:

Keeping healthcare professionals informed with cutting-edge updates and advancements in hospital-at-home care.

Advancing worldwide awareness:

Highlighting the value and benefits of hospital-at-home care for patients, healthcare systems, and communities.

“We talked a lot about the HaH community that this meeting has helped to build, but with this congress we became a tribe. A tribe is a group of people who are “your people” in a deeply meaningful way. We addressed the models, technology, scalability, and more but for what I am most pleased is what the future holds – HaH is a major culture change, and we will continue developing it beyond borders through more meetings and the dedicated WHAHC community space.”

Prof. Bruce Allen Leff
